A Note from Pastor Kayla

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ,

As we approach the month of November, we find that there is added opportunity to share in our gratefulness with Thanksgiving, gratitude challenges, among other encouragements to give thanks for both the simplistic as well as the more elaborate people and things in our lives.

Following a month that was full of many emotions for a variety of reasons, I wanted to take a moment to give thanks in particular to you all as a congregation and to Kris. First, you as the congregation are the people that permit Kris and I to live into the calling where we feel God wants us to be, callings in the field of ministry. Though the job is not always easy, it is truly an honor to be able to serve you in times of need, to work next to you whenever a chance arises, and to continue to share in moments of fellowship both planned and unexpected.

And to Kris, you bust your bottom right alongside me, spending way too many hours in the office more weeks than not. You provide creative insight when I am not able to, encouragement when things get tough, a loving presence to your little peanut, and energy that brings excitement for learning across all ages.

Without all of you, this place would not be the same. Each and every person who is a part of the GLC family carries an important role and as we move into this next month, I give thanks for the various roles that each of you have.

I also give thanks for new opportunities. Beginning this Sunday, November 4, there is a chance to try something new as we help to bridge a relationship with our brothers and sisters at the congregational church here in Glyndon. Due to unfortunate circumstances they have been without a pastor for the last few months. In September, I was approached about helping out in filling the pastor vacancy. After much discussion and prayerful consideration, we are excited to begin a trial phase. I will lead worship at the congregational church at 8am and then come over to GLC for our worship at 9am.

During this time, I hope that we are able to find that our relationships are enriched as those at the congregational church join us on occasion for worship and hopefully more regularly for our Sunday morning Bible study. With this new endeavor, we as staff and the council, find that many great opportunities are present and look forward to exploring this option more with you as our church family as well as with the congregational church.

Blessings to you all this November,
Pastor Kayla

Opportunities for Fellowship and Service

The women of the Esther Circle would love to invite you to consider joining them for their monthly gathering. They meet the third Thursday of each month at 1pm in various members houses. The information about meeting location can be obtained in the newsletter or by contacting the office. It is a lovely time of fellowship, treats, and devotions.

Additionally, there is an invite to join in the stewardship day, better known as quilting. There is just a small group of people and more hands would permit more quilts to be made for local and global ministries. Quilting is typically the first Tuesday of the month, from 9am to around 1pm. Coffee and lunch are both part of the day. All are welcome, no matter the skill level!

Over Coffee with Kris

Some seasons in life are more difficult than others, for many various reasons. This season has been one of those that has been more difficult for me. I am trying to make positive changes to “take back” my life in different areas. First, I have started the Sanford Profile diet, though I don’t like the word diet. I have been over-weight my entire life, thus this has been a struggle my entire life. I remember trying slim fast as a Junior High student, and the “apple” diet (only eating an apple for lunch) in High School. Looking back, it makes me sad that I did those things at such a young age, but I didn’t know what else to do. At the time I felt like I tried everything, simple now that I have said it out loud, okay, written it for you to know, I have even more accountability.

Secondly, I am going to start an online book study, and I want to invite you to join me. We will be reading the book “Seven: an experimental mutiny against excess” by Jen Hatmaker. The seven areas that Hatmaker “takes on” are clothes, spending, waste, food, possessions, media, and stress. And, I think that if some of those areas of my life were a bit more streamlined or “healthy”, that may help me overall as well. We are going to read a chapter a month, and “live into” each area for one week that month as well. Contact me if you are interested in joining me, we have a great crew assembled already.

And thirdly, though parts of my life are more difficult than others, I am trying to be thankful for the good instead of only dwelling on the bad. November is a good month to be thankful. Here is a prayer of thanksgiving from my favorite prayer book, “Guerrillas of Grace.”

Lord, thank you for each moment, for the blue-sky moment, the softening earth, the refreshing wind, the yellow bush, for my full heart and the joy rising in me. Soften me to receive whatever comes as a gift and to praise you in it.

Lord, thank you for each moment, for the twilight moment, the pause, the good tired, for the quiet reflection, the slowing down, the mysterious sunset, for the wisdom growing inside me. Gentle me to feel whatever comes as a gift and to praise you in it.

Lord, thank you for each moment, for the midnight moment, the loneliness, the fretful wondering, for the watchful stars, the long ache, the sleepless wait, and the hope straining in me. Focus me to see whatever comes as a gift and to praise you in it.

Lord, thank you for each moment, for the high-noon moment, the job, the necessary routine, for the sweaty struggle, the impulse to change, and the courage gathering in me. Ground me to wrestle with whatever comes as a gift and to praise you in it.

Lord, thank you for each moment, for the shared moment, the listening, the unguarded word, for the fragile openness, the ready smile, the accepted difference, for my passionate heart and the trust rooting in me. Stretch me to grow with whatever comes as a gift and to praise you in it.

Thank you for each moment, for the charged moment, the confrontation, for the hard decision, the unexpected growing, for my intense heart and the truth expanding in me. Free me to be open to whatever comes as a gift and to praise you in it.

Thank you for each moment, for the holy moment, the music, the child's eyes, for the sunlight, the touch, the tears, the unutterable beauty, for the life and love and heart in me aware, and the wholeness spreading in me. Touch me through whatever comes as a gift; that I may be grateful and praise you in it.

May you have much to be thankful for, this and every season,

Kristina Dernier
